

The University of Delaware Press is pleased to announce the launch of its new series

Global Enlightenment and Religion

Series Editor: Paul E. Kerry, Brigham Young University

Editorial Advisory Board

Owen Anderson, Arizona State University

Wilson Moses, Penn State University

Stephanie Barclay, Notre Dame University

Joel Rasmussen, University of Oxford

Michael Breidenbach, Ave Maria University

Isabel Rivers, Queen Mary University of London

Catherine Brekus, Harvard University

Jonathan Sheehan, UC Berkeley

Anthea Butler, University of Pennsylvania

David Sorkin, Yale University

Ruth Jackson Ravenscroft, University of Cambridge

Jan Stievermann, Heidelberg University

Brian Young, University of Oxford

Global Enlightenment and Religion, a new book series from the University of Delaware Press, explores the relationship between religion and Enlightenment from the mid-seventeenth through the early nineteenth centuries. This series highlights research nested in the history of ideas, intellectual history, theology and religious studies, political thought, literature and the arts, and is open to a variety of methodologies and theoretical perspectives, especially those from comparative and interdisciplinary frames of reference. It aims to contribute to the growing body of scholarship that acknowledges that Enlightenment and religion were not necessarily opposed but could mutually inform and complement one another.

For further information, or to submit a manuscript or proposal, please contact series editor Dr. Paul E. Kerry at paul_kerry@byu.edu